

Instructions for authors

Articles submitted to this publication should be prepared in accordance with the general requirements for scientific papers. They should contain the following elements: purpose and object of the research; discussion and evaluation of the researched issue's historiography; sources; and conclusions. A short annotation and keywords in the language of the article should be given before the main text. A summary (no less than 1600 characters) and keywords in English should be provided at the end of the article. A reference list is given at the end of the article in accordance with the examples of references given below. It is recommended to start the list with archival sources, followed by published sources and literature (using continuous numbering). The entries should be arranged alphabetically: if the article is in Latin script, the citations in Latin script should precede those in Cyrillic script; if the article is in Cyrillic script, vice versa. An in-text citation should be given in brackets, the number of the reference should be followed by a comma and the number of the cited page. Citing a manuscript, it is necessary to provide the number of the folium cited (fol.); citing a multivolume publication, the number of the volume (vol.), and if necessary, the number of the page (p.).

Requirements for formatting bibliographic references

(by the standard LST ISO 690:2010)

General requirements

Primary statement of responsibility. The last name of the author is given in capitals, followed by comma and then by the first name. If the article has been written by one to three authors, the names of all the authors are given consecutively, separated by a comma. If there are four or more authors, only the name of the first author is given, followed by the abbreviation "et al.". If the author used a pseudonym, for example, K. S., the title is followed by the phrase "Signature: K. S." If the true name of the author is known, it is given before the title, and the pseudonym, after the title.

Title. The main title of a cited document is given in italics, other titles (those of a volume, issue or series) and the subtitles in the regular font.

The parallel title is not provided. It may be given only in those cases when it is necessary. It is written in italics and separated from the main title by the equality sign.

Secondary statement of responsibility. The secondary statement of responsibility (compilers, editors, translators etc.) is not a necessary part of a reference. It should be provided only if needed.

Edition. Information on the edition is given when an edition other than the first is cited.

Publication data. If a document has more than one place of publication, it is the first or the highlighted place of publication that should be given in the reference. Other places of publication may be given if necessary, separated by semi-colon.

If a document has more than one publisher, it is the first or the highlighted publisher that should be given in the reference. Other publishers may be given if necessary.

Length. The length of a cited document is indicated by the number of pages, (folia, sections etc.) given in numerals, and if a document is multivolume, by the number of volumes. The length of a chapter or of an article within a document is indicated by page range. Unnumbered pages in square brackets are given only if they constitute the entire document, or most of it. Inserted folia, which are unincluded in the main pagination, as well as illustrations (tables, portraits, graphs, maps, facsimiles etc.) should be omitted.

Series. Series information is not a necessary element of a reference. It should be given only if needed.

Identifiers. If a cited document has an international standard number (ISBN, ISSN etc.) or a digital object identifier (DOI), it should be given in the reference. DOI is given instead of the internet access address.
